

Kym Nichols

My name is Kym Nichols, and I am proud to call Carmangay my lifelong home. As a fourth-generation resident, I have a deep-rooted commitment to our village and its future.

I have served on Council since 2007, with the exception of one term I took off to prioritize time with my family while my children were in high school. Throughout my time in public service, I've also remained active with various community groups and initiatives.

Leading meaningful projects in a small community with limited resources is never easy – but it is possible when people work together. I've had the privilege of being part of several transformative initiatives, including the creation of a regional water commission and the replacement of major water and sewer infrastructure along Grand Avenue and Elmore Street.

One of the accomplishments I'm most proud of is the establishment of a community-run grocery store, developed through the incredible support of local groups and dedicated volunteers. The store, which operated until the school reopened in 2012, reinvested 100% of its profits into local projects – a true example of what we can achieve together.

I believe the heart of any great community is its people – and the shared vision we hold for an even greater future. I'm running for Council again because I believe in Carmangay. We are fortunate to have an excellent administration and public works team, and I'm proud of what we're achieving together.

Looking ahead, I want to continue building on our momentum. I am committed to supporting smart, sustainable residential and commercial growth, and I will advocate for attracting viable businesses that meet the needs of our residents and contribute to the vibrancy of our village.

Together, we can ensure Carmangay remains a great – and affordable – place to live, now and for future generations.
